ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Education came to serve the administrative and economic interests of the nation-states and became an essential aspect of the development of national identity. Presently Internationalisation has become a mantra in higher education. Not only do we notice a stronger emphasis from the nation-states and their international bodies on international co-operation and exchange. We also see that institutions develop their own strategies to internationalise their research and their teaching. It is a process of planning and implementing products and services so that they can easily be adapted to specific local languages and cultures. When analysing rationales, we have to take into account the diversity of stakeholders' groups in higher education: the government sector, the private sector and the educational sector.

The present one day seminar envisages a meaningful dialogue, discourse and deliberation on the emerging areas of internationalization of Higher Education concern, which should help in developing international understanding and multiculturalism among the stake holders.
